BAU BREATH
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, gripping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without gripping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 11c and 50c.

LONGER SKIRTS, SLENDER LINES, VOGUE FOR 1922

Ravishing Colors to Be Outstanding Note of This Year's Styles for Women.

By Cosmopolitan News Service.
NEW YORK, March 18.—The skirt grows longer—though gradually—and lace dresses come "in." The waist line creeps downward. Length and slenderness become a keynote in suits.

And Miss Spring Twenty-two will wear a flower in her buttonhole. The vaunted, perhaps, of the vanities of that Vanity Fair called Fashion, in arriving for springtime blusters its way onward, with breathless dispatches arriving from many points.

London, one hears, is having little, or none, of the blatant notes of Paris on the subject of color. Crossing the channel, the spring styles are being subdued by the fog, and are blossoming in London's West End in color tones that are either neutral or sedate.

Even here, in radical New York, at the Flower show, which is being accompanied by much dressing and purveying of fashion ideas, there has been a mild rebellion against Paris dictates. Buckles and stones which are used for various fastenings and decorative effects with dinner gowns are far from Parisian brilliancy or daring.

But evening dresses, by all the advance signs, will hang by one shoulder, barely a narrow band for decorative and safety purposes over the other. Geometrical symmetry, in the sense it was known in former years, is decidedly not the thing. Classic lines are being drawn but with variations unknown to the ancients. Lacy fabrics drape sharply to one side, and draped girdles, tied at the side, flare along the skirt. Some also flaunt wing effects of chiffon.

Draperies and soft fabrics swathing the figure and rippling away into narrow trains.

These come from Paris. The American reaction to some of the recently imported ideas has not been universally favorable. It is early for predictions as to whether Rue de la Paix will be followed slavishly.

The ravishing color schemes are still being dumped on Yankee shores. Ruby velvet, green leaves and purple grapes, such combinations, on a single cape.

Lip stick red, for lining of loose sleeves, is another late arrival.

The Latest Word from Paris By Marie Suzanne

(Copyright, 1922.)

A MARTIAL ET ARMAND creation drapes mauve chiffon veiled in gold lace over its exaggeratedly bouffant skirt of cloth of gold in somewhat the manner of a curtain drawn aside to reveal a stage setting, and the frontmost sections are weighted by heavy gold tassels. The skirt itself is the background for a choux of mauve chiffon from which depend chiffon ends and strands of crystal beads. The bodice is supported by ribbon-like strips of the gold cloth that encircle the neck like a flat gold chain. The head-dress repeats the chiffon and crystal bead motif used at the front of the skirt.

To impress us still more with the importance of lace, Martial et Armand use it in a second formal evening gown, this time in silver, and combined with peacockblue satin. The bodice is perfectly plain and sleeveless, and uses the straight-across neckline. It blouses over a silver metal girdle from the center front of which pointed sections of the satin fall. Silver ribbons attached at the back of the shoulders are finished with silver bead tassels.

WANTS TO PAY 3-CENT TAX IN INSTALLMENTS

ATLANTIC CITY, March 18.—How to pay a three-cent income tax in four equal installments was the puzzling question put to Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Zimmerman by a woman yesterday. This was the amount of tax computed to be owing on the woman's return. When advised to pay the tax in a lump sum, the fair resident became indignant. She announced her intention of paying in four installments. It cost her an additional cent in tax and three cents for each one cent money order a total of sixteen cents.

TOM BURKE IN POOR VOICE AT FINAL CONCERT

Irish Tenor Rushes From Train to Stage—Best in Lifting Whistles.

Tom Burke, Irish tenor, and St. Patrick's Day were fitting companions yesterday when this singer gave a recital as the final concert of the Ten Star Series presented by T. Arthur Smith, Inc. But Mr. Burke, as he explained, had just come in from Texas, an apology that was made because informal dress had been caused by the delay of his trunk. And this tenor was either ill or very tired, for his voice was tight and forced as though he with difficulty put through his program.

Nor could he summon the spirit of his songs. They held no illusions and very little individuality. His German group of Sinding, Wagner and Strauss he did not even know. His phrasing was very bad, and more is needed in these introspective songs—Wagner's "Schmerz," Strauss' "Traum durch die Dämmerung"—that opera recitative and bravura, even though the recitative passages were well done. The subtle overtones were lost, the rhythm of Strauss not approximated.

He was best in his lifting "Little Irish Whistles," with Glib words, and in the French Canadian "Little Bateese," in the same manner, that he had to repeat. "Lament of Ian the Proud," by Griffes, was effective in the modern French manner with dramatic climax, and he sang Grieg's "Ein Traum" very attractively. Old English of Purcell and two Handel works opened the program, and it was closed with a modern French group, to which he added the Irish "Next Market Day." Walter Golde was at the piano.
